May 04, 2015

The 2015 Mr. Gay World contest took place in South Africa where delegates from across the world came together to showcase their talents and skills.

21 year old Klaus Burkart of Germany took home the title stating, "I would like to lead the world to a point where it is not essential to even have a coming out."

The Mr. Gay World organization describes the competitions as: "The competition takes place over an intense four days and includes various challenges including ... a photo challenge ... a sports challenge ... a fashion show/run way challenge ... a swim suit challenge ... a public speaking and a local outreach challenge where MGW is able to work with a local charity to give back to the community in hosting the competition. The delegate chosen to represent his peers on a global stage will not only have the inner beauty of confidence, self assurance, charisma and natural leadership abilities but he will also take care in his outward beauty. The delegate will treat his body as his temple and will be active and outgoing. He will have impeccable grooming standards and has a thorough understanding of what attire is appropriate for each engagement he is to encounter."

Burkart is now the youngest contestant to win the title. He has big goals for his new title and looks to encourage change in the world stating, "As Mr Gay World I would like to be a role model for young gays all over the world and help them with their coming out and also change young people's opinion of homosexuality."
